AFRO-AMERICAN COUNCIL.

Delegates Have a Lively Discussion on Political Topics—Afro American Press
Convention Notes.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 28.—The National Afro-American Council met here to-day with an attendance of 400 of the representative colored men of the United States. Bishop Walters, president of the organization, was in the chair, and after addresses of welcome by Governor Mount and Mayor Taggart, he made his address, which was the feature of the day. He said that the colored race was passing through the most critical period in its history: that great wisdom was needed to guide its destinies, and that the race must stand for its natural and constitutional rights, not in a combative, revengeful spirit, but in a manly, courageous way.

He pleaded for a full recognition of the privileges accorded to every white citizen of the United States, denounced the recent disfranchisement amendments in North Carolina, and accused the Federal government of neglect in not protecting the franchise rights of the Negro. He admitted that prejudice was on the increase, but urged that it is best to cease resistance, and do by education, industry, and character what cannot otherwise be peaceably accomplished. He urged the race to act independently in politics, and declared that politicians must cease to make the Negro a pawn in the political game.

Bishop Walters, at the conclusion of his address, said that in the making up of the committee which is to frame the address to be issued to the country he should instruct the secretary in instances where Democratic organizations were represented by delegates from the same localities, where Republican clubs were similarly represented in the place the name of a Democrat and a Republican in the committee.

This brought James Lewis, of New Orleans, to his feet. "A Negro Democrat," he exclaimed. "Are there any Negro Democrats here? I should like to see one."

Then Delegate J. Milton Turner, President Grant's Minister to Liberia, and who for many years has been an ardent Democrat, arose and said:

"I have come here to participate in the deliberations of this convention imbued with the idea that its purpose was not a political one, and that no man would appear as a Democrat or Republican, so far as his carrying out his obligations to this convention may be concerned. I am here as a representative of my race, that, and that alone, and I wish right here to inveigh against any attempt by any man who enters this convention hall as a delegate to foist political questions or political discussions upon us."

The National Afro-American Press Association elected the following officers to day: President, Cyrus Fields Adams, editor of the Chicago Appeal; Vice President, George L. Knox, of the Freeman, Indianapolis; treasurer, W. H. Stewart, of Louisville, Ky.; secretary, Alexander Manly, editor of the Washington Daily Record.

St. Luke's picnic at Lake View Park Friday, Sept. 7th, is the last and will be the best of the season. Be sure to attend.
